

Riverside Park is located northwest of downtown Indianapolis (due west from the Children’s Museum).

Riverside Park is a long, narrow park on a somewhat busy street with a public pool, tennis courts, baseball diamonds and playgrounds.

In order to find a grassy space between the potentially busy sections of the park, it is best to meet at the corner of West Roache Street and East Riverside Drive. There is a gap between baseball/soccer fields where we can spread out a little on the grass. There are some parking lots in the area that belong to the park, but it is probably easiest to just park on the street. There should be plenty of empty spaces on Saturday morning.
